

Kico Glass Pricing

Overview

There are several levels of subscription. Pricing is user- and volume- based. Furthermore, there are options to which you can subscribe to separately. Those again are based on your subscription level.

All subscriptions include the basic cloud platform functions. Volume and number of users on that part determine on what subscription level you are, and thus in what subscription level your additional options come. Some of the additional options will give you additional users as well. People with access to advanced options (for example the accounting interface) will have access to the basic functions as well, but you can control on who has access to which advanced options.

With some add on modules (to come later) there will be users with restricted access only, for example for progress reporting from the factory floor.

Prices are set to what we see appropriate at this early stage and are subject to change later. However, if you sign up now at these prices, we will guarantee them to stay close to the price you signed up for.

Volume Calculation

Volume is calculated on the number of order items entered. Each simple order item counts as one unit of volume. Non-rectangular shapes count as two units, and pieces with (any number of) cut outs or holes count as two units as well, as long as they are rectangular. Non-rectangular shapes with holes and/or cut outs count as three units.

Please be aware that we will not restrict you or your work in any way, if you exceed the number of units on your subscription level. However, if you consistently and significantly exceed the volume of your subscription level over an extended period of time, then we will have to upgrade you to the next higher level.

All prices are in A$, excluding GST. For other currencies please inquire for a firm quote, or as a guide just use the current exchange rate.
